Gutta Percha Water Pipez.—The substitution of some other material besides lead and iron for service pipes has frequently been advocated on account, as has been arged, of the injurious effects on health resulting from the awe of water which passed through lead and copper pipes, and the rusting of iron pipe. Gutta percha pipe has one been in use for this purpose nina years in this country and two or three years lorger in England, and doubtless (when properly maile of pure maierial) it is not acted upon by strong fluoric and muriatio or diffun nirich and sulphutic acide, soda water, cider, or alkaise, agencies which are most active in destroying pipes it common use. Its manufacturers claim that it is stronger and sixteen tiues lighter than lead, and consequently is cheaper to transport and handle that it will stand freat letter than any other material, and that the bore is so smooth that it will discharge more water thun other pipes, and what it charge more water thun other pipes, and what it of the first and greatest importance it imparts no poles to the first and greatest importance it imparts no poles.
